BIG TEXTILE PLANT IS LIKELY TO LOCATE HERE

Senate Will Probe Editorial Attack On Underwood Bridge Company Moves To Erect Structure

CONTRACTS MADE IS ANNOUNCEMENT FROM DIRECTORS

Definite Plans Mapped Out At Meeting Of
the Officials

ENGINEER SAYS PLANS ARE GOOD

Nashville Concern May
Construct Project
Across River

Formal announcement was made today by the Limestone-Morgan Bridge company that it had entered a contract with the Hewitt company, of Spartanburg, S. C., to conduct a financial campaign for the purpose of raising funds with which to build a bridge across the Tennessee river here.

The following statement was issued Saturday by the company:

At a meeting of the directors of the Limestone-Morgan Bridge company, held on December 12th, forward looking action was taken toward the building of the bridge over the Tennessee river at this place. Definite plans were made for the selling of the stocks and bonds necessary to finance the construction of this bridge.

This matter has been given consideration for some time, and various propositions have received the consideration of the directors. The requirements of the State Highway Commission and those of the War Department of the United States Government have received consideration and have now been met. The plans adopted were first submitted to J. W. Johnson, consulting engineer of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad company, and who is also acting as engineer for the Limestone-Morgan Bridge company. Mr. Johnson has passed upon these plans with respect to the design, construction and cost, and in his report says:

"From plans approved by the Alabama State Highway commission, I have computed the quantities required for the foundations, masonry, concrete, creosoted timber and steel work. The design of the steel work is good and if the bridge be built in accordance with the plans, you will get a very substantial structure."

On September 15, 1924, the highway department of Alabama unanimously adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved by the highway department of Alabama that being without funds to build a bridge over the Tennessee River and knowing the need of such a bridge, that the said highway department goes on record to the following effect:

"If a toll bridge is built over the Tennessee River at or near the City of Decatur, the highway department will not build a bridge over the Tennessee river at a point nearer than thirty-five miles of said toll bridge, provided the said toll bridge is built to conform to the specifications required by the State Highway Commission and the Federal Bureau of Public Roads and provided further that the said toll bridge owners enter into a contract to sell to the State of Alabama said toll bridge at a price to be fixed by a Board of Arbitrators to be selected jointly by the Highway Department and the said Toll Bridge Company at any time when the Highway Department desires to purchase said bridge."

Thereupon, the Limestone-Morgan Bridge Company submitted its intention of starting work in compliance with the terms of this resolution, and submitted the plans and proposals

NEAR EAST RELIEF WILL BE STRESSED

Prominent Speakers To Present Claims Here Sunday

Near East day will be observed in the Twin Cities Sunday at 11 o'clock in the various churches.

Prominent, well-informed speakers from Birmingham and Chattanooga will tell of the needs of this national relief committee to carry on its work. Forty thousand orphans are entirely dependent on this national organization. Other thousands are partially dependent on it, while 100,000 still suffer in refugee camps without provision. Starvation would face all these should food support stop. An opportunity will be given Sunday to respond to the Master's challenge to do unto others as ye would that they should do unto you.

Ala. Commission Answers Solons

The statement of Senator Copeland of New York in the senate Friday to the effect that the Alabama public utility law is inadequate to provide proper regulation for distribution for sale of electric energy in Alabama is incorrect, according to a telegram forwarded today by members of the Alabama public service commission in a telegram to Senator Hefflin, of Alabama.

The commission stated in the telegram that Alabama had a very comprehensive public utility act, which authorizes the commission to supervise and regulate, in the public interest, all public utilities doing business in the state and this law is being actively administered by the public service commission.

The same Washington news story carried inference and insinuations made by Senator McKellar that the Alabama commission was being influenced or was collaborating with

MEMBERSHIP ROLLS OF KAMRAM GROTTO ARE LARGER TODAY

New Prophets Tired But Happy Following
Ceremonial

EVENT IS SUCCESS IN EVERY WAY

Ladies Of Eastern Star
Extended Thanks
For Banquet

The membership rolls of Kamram Grotto are considerably enlarged today and some 154 new prophets today were tired but happy as a result of the initial ceremonial here of the Grotto Friday, when a large class was taken into the order.

The ceremonial here was a success in every way. Officials of Kamram Grotto, as well as of the Albany-Decatur Grotto club were highly pleased with the event and described it as "the most successful ceremonial ever held outside of Birmingham."

The day's program got underway early Friday, but reached its climax in the late afternoon. The special train from Birmingham reached here about 4 o'clock and the lines of the long parade were formed near the Albany Louisville and Nashville station. The line, led by Sheriff Ernest Poole and Mayor James A. Nelson, mounted, moved over to Second avenue and thence through the business districts of both cities. Hundreds of prophets and candidates were in the line, which contained two brass bands. Hundreds of people watched the spectacle from the curbs along the route. The drill corps from Birmingham gave several interesting exhibitions at various street corners.

The parade reached the Princess theatre about 5 o'clock and the initiation ceremonies were begun almost immediately. They were concluded by 8 o'clock. During the meantime the ladies of the three local chapters of the Eastern Star, Albany, Decatur and Austinville chapters, served a banquet on the upper floor of the Harris Motors company. Officials of the Albany-Decatur Grotto Club today expressed their deep appreciation to the ladies who served the banquet. In 22 minutes, 800 men were fed in the building.

The Alabama Power company in its official capacity, it was said. This statement "is untrue, unfounded and unjust," the commission replied.

Senator McKellar was reported to have said that there had been no differences between the commission and the Alabama Power company. The commission advised Senator Hefflin that there had been sharp differences between the Alabama commission and the Alabama Power company and that these differences had been settled upon the commission's terms.

The telegram of the public service commission requested Senator Hefflin to read the telegram into the record in the senate proceedings Saturday.

The commission made it clear it does not want to be regarded as taking any side in the present senatorial controversy, but wanted the Alabama situation kept clear as a matter of record.

CHARGE CALLED LIE BY SENATOR DURING DEFENSE IN SENATE

Alabama Solon Denies
He Was Influenced
In Framing Bill

CONSENT IS GIVEN TO PROBE AFFAIR

Editorial in Washington
Newspapers Arouses
Wrath of Senator

(Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Senator Underwood, democrat, of Alabama, today obtained unanimous consent of the senate to have a senate investigation of statements made about the Underwood Muscle Shoals bill and himself, as an editorial appearing in today's issue of The Washington Herald.

The editorial was referred to the judiciary committee, which was given authority to subpoena the author of the editorial and other persons to "get at the bottom of the charges."

The Alabama senator and former democratic floor leader declared the newspaper had charged him with having been influenced in preparation of his bill by the Alabama Power company and yielding to corporate influence in his public life.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Published charges that he had been influenced by the Alabama Power company in preparation of his Muscle Shoals bill was characterized in the senate today by Senator Underwood, democrat, of Alabama, as a "lie."

"I want to challenge the statement of any man on this floor or off," he said, "that I have been influenced in any way in the preparation of this bill by the Alabama Power company. The statement is false in its conception. The collaborations of the Alabama Power company has been on the other side of the power bill."

Senator Underwood later defended his reply to the charges to a general defense against inferences that he was yielding to corporate interests and declared the Underwood tariff bill was proof to the contrary.

The Alabama senator made particular reference to an editorial appearing in today's issue of The Washington Herald.

This editorial, he said, not only made it appear he was influenced by The Alabama Power company, but connected him with influence in general.

"I believe the editorial was purchased by the interests who are trying to gobble this power," Senator Underwood asserted. "I have no proof but it is apparent that a corrupt influence is behind this lie."

Mr. Underwood said that President Martin, of the Alabama Power company, had told him he did not wish to lease Muscle Shoals under the Underwood bill. The leasing contract to be made under the Underwood bill, the senator said, would be in the hands of the President of the United States.

The fallacy of the editorial, he said, was that it stated the power companies are behind the Underwood bill to make nitrogen for the farmers "when every pussy-footed step of the power companies has been in the direction of power and not nitrogen."

"It's a damnable misrepresentation of a lobby that is standing around these doors now," he said. "I know they are here and you know they are here."

Taking up the suggestion that he was yielding to the great corporate

Veteran Leader American Labor Called By Death

Samuel Gompers Is Granted Wish To Die In U. S.

BODY LEAVES FOR THE EAST

Interment Will Be Made At Old Home
In N. Y. State

(Associated Press)
SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Dec. 13.—The body of Samuel Gompers, late president of the American Federation of Labor, lay in a great bronze, flag-draped, flower banked casket in an undertaking parlor here this morning, while thousands of union workmen, in overalls, in grimy shirts, in white collars, representing every line of labor, filed past to do homage to their fallen leader, who passed away early this morning.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Dec. 13.—Samuel Gompers' body will be taken east by way of St. Louis, leaving here at 11 o'clock tonight, according to tentative arrangements made this morning.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Samuel Gompers, late president of the American Federation of Labor, will be buried in the Sleepy Hollow cemetery, near Tarrytown, N. Y., it was said here today by Harry Mones, a personal friend of Mr. Gompers.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Dec. 13.—The grand old leader of American Federation of Labor, is dead, Samuel Gompers was granted his last wish. He died on American soil at 4:10 this morning, eleven hours after his arrival from Mexico City, where he was stricken last week.

Death was close on his heels as he sped from the Mexican capital to the borders of his own country. For a time he eluded the final enemy; doggedly he fought off the issue, but death, only slightly in the rear, soon caught up with the exhausted leader of the American Federation of Labor, and overtook him as he lay on his bed in a local hotel.

Mr. Gompers did not evade the challenge when it came to him face to face, neither did he give up the fight. Surrounding Mr. Gompers at his last moments were the men whom he had fought many of labor's battles throughout a generation of American union labor developments.

At his bedside and holding his hands was James Duncan, of Quincy, Mass., vice president of the federation, who has stood shoulder to shoulder with his leader for 44 years.

Their party was pathetic. Holding his hand also was William E. Mahon, of Detroit, president of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees, whom the dying federation president affectionately called "Bill," and whom he had told several days ago that he wished to shake his hand just before he went.

There were others no less close to Mr. Gompers. John E. Giles, cashier of the federation, Martin Ryan of Kansas City, Mathew Wool, of Chicago, and James Duncan of Quincy, Mass., all members of the executive committee, were there.

SUITABLE BUILDING ALL NECESSARY TO 'CINCH' LARGE MILL

Second Great Eastern Concern Seeking
Dixie Location

BEST SITE FOUND IN TWIN CITIES

Engineers Already have Discovered Locations
In Albany-Decatur

Announcement was made this morning from the offices of the Chamber of Commerce that another eastern organization was contemplating the locating of an industry of 45,000 spindles in Albany-Decatur in the very near future. In addition to the 45,000 spindles there will also be 416 cards and additional weaving equipment employing a maximum of 980 people.

Negotiations have been underway for some weeks on the basis of a suitable site and building under a lease plan with the option to purchase. The company has been in the business for a number of years and is a firm of high financial standing and backing, according to information that has been given out.

The reason for the move from the present location is given that the most suitable location has been found at Albany-Decatur, a splendid labor supply, excellent power facilities, and the heart of the raw material. The latter has been of great influence to the eastern mill owners that have been busy uniting the scene of textile industry from the east to the southland. The south is rapidly becoming both the manufacturer and the producer. The saving on freights alone in the transportation of raw materials is a great factor in the moves that are being made and others that are being contemplated at the present time.

An ability by local officials to float a loan for the building is all that is necessary to bring the manufacturers here to close the deal. This was the note of confidence expressed this morning in speaking of the details regarding the new industry. However immediate action is necessary.

Engineers have already been sent to this section by the mill owners have made a tentative acceptance of the site and checked back on all technical data that has been given out in surveys by the local commerce body and in the end recommended that the mill owners select this site for the gigantic move.

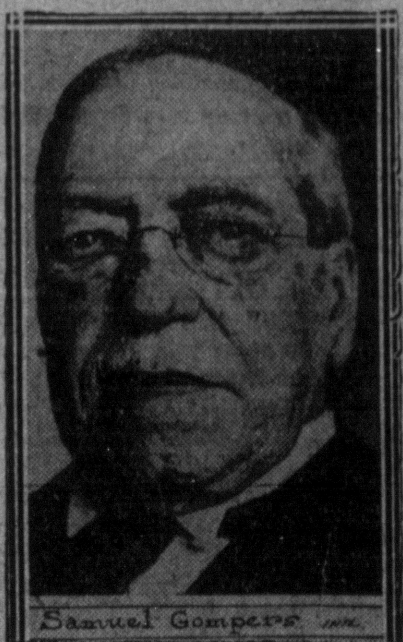

This is the second offer within the present week that has come to the doors of Albany-Decatur and begged admittance. Two tremendous projects have been offered to the cities. Indeed it looks as if the year 1925 is to be a real year in industrial expansion over the Tennessee Valley.

'ALABAMA DAY' IS OBSERVED LOCALLY

Fitting Programs Given In Schools Here On Friday

The Albany and Decatur schools celebrated Alabama Day with very fitting programs on Friday, the day set aside by Governor Brandon to commemorate the admission of the state into the Union.

The Albany grammar schools held a very pretty pageant, with a pantomime of the high lights of American history, stressing Alabama's part in the world's changes, leading the story from the discovery of the continent to the present, with excellent characterizations of the colonial period.

Albany high's program consisted largely of study courses in Alabama history and reviews the study of a special list of Alabama writers and Alabama's place in politics in the present and the past.

Decatur schools had programs consisting largely of talks by students who were specially prepared on different phases of Alabama history and traditions, and readings from Alabama writers. The seventh grade history class conducted a catechism on the more important and interesting facts in Alabama history.

Sir John took a turn in the cabin, his wife at his side. It was preposterous that he should stand and argue upon such a matter with Rosamund of all people, and yet she was compelling him to it against his every inclination, against common sense itself.

"If he so urges it, we'll not deny him," he said at last, deeming it best to humor her. "We'll take him back to England if he demands it, and let him stand his trial there. But Oliver Trevellick must realize too well what is in store for him to make any such demand."

He paused before her, and held out his hands in entreaty. "Come, Rosamund, my dear! You are distraught, you—"

"I am indeed distraught, Sir John," she answered, and took the hands that he extended. "Oh, have pity!" she cried with a sudden change to utter intercession. "I implore you to have pity!"

"What pity can I show you, child? You have but to name—"

"This not pity for me, but pity for him that I am beseeching of you."

"For him?" he cried, frowning again. "For Oliver Trevellick?"

He dropped her hands and stood away. "God's light!" he swore. "You sue for pity for Oliver Trevellick, for that renegade, that incarnate devil! Oh, you are mad!"

"Mad!" she said simply. "I love him," she said simply. "That answer smote him instantly still. Under the shock of it he just stood and stared at her again, his jaw fallen."

"You love him!" he said at last below his breath. "You love him! You love a man who is a pirate, a renegade, the abductor of yourself and of Lionel, the man who murdered your brother!"

"He did not," she was fierce in her denial of it. "I have learnt the truth of that matter."

"From his lips, I suppose?" said Sir John, and he was unable to suppress a sneer. "And you believed him?"

"Had I not believed him I should not have married him."

"Married him?" Sudden horror came now to temper his bewilderment. Was there to be no end to these astounding revelations? Had they reached the climax yet, he wondered, or was there still more to come?

"You married that infamous villain!" he asked, and his voice was expressionless.

"I did," in Algiers on the night we landed there."

He stood gaping at her whilst a man might count to a dozen, and then abruptly he exploded.

"It is enough!" he roared, shaking a clenched fist at the low ceiling of the cabin.

"It is enough, as God's my witness. If there were no other reason to hang him, that would be reason and to spare. You may look to me to make an end of this infamous marriage within the hour."

"Ah, if you will but listen to me!" she pleaded.

"Listen to you?" He paused by the door, to which he had stepped in his fury, intent upon giving the word that there and then should make an end, and, summoning Oliver Trevellick before him, announce his fate to him and see it executed on the spot.

"Listen to you?" he repeated, scorn and anger blending in his voice. "I have heard more than enough already!"

There were a score of questions a man of perspicuity would now have asked, not one of which appears to have occurred to the knight of Arwenack. If anything arrested him upon the cabin's threshold, delayed him in the execution of the thing he had resolved upon no doubt it was sheer curiosity as to what further extravagances Rosamund might yet have in her mind to utter.

"This man has suffered," she told him, and was not put off by the hard laugh with which he mocked the statement. "God alone knows what he has suffered in body and in soul for sins which he never committed. Much of that suffering came to him through me. I know"

interests, he said the Underwood tariff bill showed he was not "yielding to the great corporate interests."

"The editorial is attempting to insert a vicious lie into the minds of the American people," he said.

The Senator charged that the corridors of the capital were filled with lobbyists of power interests, trying to defeat the Underwood bill and have a power bill passed.

Senator Underwood charged that the power companies had "collaborated" in the preparation of the Norris bill and not the Underwood bill. He accused the writer of the editorial of being "too cowardly" to attack openly the president of the United States, but "sought by unavailing" to attack those who were trying to carry out the President's idea.

The editorial, he declared, "actually was the first attack on the present administration of the United States."

Senator Brookhart read into the record an analysis of the commercial department of the German nitrate industry. It showed, the senator said, how Chilean nitrates had been excluded in Germany by the production of domestic fixed nitrogen.

Resuming the speech he was making when recess was taken yesterday, Senator Howell, Republican of Nebraska, said he wanted to emphasize that "what I am about to say means no reflection on the senator from Alabama (Mr. Underwood)."

"I disagree with him," Senator Howell said, "but for his motives I have the highest respects."

"The Underwood bill would require the obligatory production of at least 40,000 tons of fixed nitrogen," he said, "or 80,000,000 pounds at a value of $9,600,000 at present market prices."

"Assuming that it can be produced for half the present price at Muscle Shoals there is an apparent saving of $4,800,000 annually to the farmers. The leaser would be entitled to 8 per cent of the cost."

Whatever of the arts and sciences may be missing from the knowledge of the modern woman, there is one talent she exercises as no generation before her has done. She wields a paint brush. Not canvases and art mediums are her concern but kitchen floors and bedroom chairs and all else about the house. So intent have New York women become upon this matter of painting their own that department and paint stores are putting in demonstrators to show women how to mix and apply good old fashioned serviceable paint. And there is a waiting line in every such shop every day of women eager to take advantage of the teaching hours.

Lord Henry Goade, dressed entirely in black, and with his gold chain of office (an ominous sign, could they have read it) upon his broad chest, stood in the doorway, silhouetted sharply against the flood of morning sunlight at his back. His benign face was extremely grave, to match the suit he had put on, but his expression lightened somewhat when his glance fell upon Rosamund standing there by the table's edge.

"I am overjoyed," he said, "to find you so far recovered, and seeming so much yourself again."

"She were better, indeed," snapped Sir John, two hectic spots burning still in his hollow cheeks. "She is dispirited, quite."

"Sir John is mistaken, my lord," was her calm assurance. "I am very far from suffering as he conceives."

"Rejoice therein, my dear," said his lordship.

"It happens," he added soberly, "that we may require your testimony in this grave matter that is toward." He turned to Sir John: "I have bidden them bring up the prisoner for sentence. Is the ordeal too much for you, Rosamund?"

"Indeed, no, my lord," she replied readily. "I welcome it." And threw back her head as one who braces herself for a trial of endurance.

"No, no," cut in Sir John, protesting fiercely. "Do not heed her, Harry. She—"

"Considering," she interrupted, "that the chief count against the prisoner must concern his dealings with myself, surely the matter is one upon which I should be heard."

"Surely, indeed," Lord Henry agreed, a little bewildered. "Always provided you are certain it will not overtax your endurance and distress you overmuch. We could perhaps dispense with your testimony."

"In that, my lord, I assure you that you are mistaken," she answered. "You cannot dispense with it."

"Be it so, then," said Sir John grimly, and he strode back to the table, prepared to take his place there.

Lord Henry's twinkling blue eyes were still considering Rosamund somewhat searchingly, his fingers tugging thoughtfully at his short tuft of ashen-colored beard. Then he turned to the door.

"Come in, gentlemen," he said, "and bid them bring up the prisoner."

Steps clanked upon the deck, and three of Sir John's officers made their appearance to complete the court that was to sit in judgment upon the renegade corsair, a judgment whose issue was foregone.

which have now been adopted. The proposal consisted of an offer made by the Nashville Bridge Company, which consists of a contract to furnish the material and build the bridge complete for the sum of Five Hundred Forty Thousand Dollars ($540,000.00). The directors had before them divers proposals ranging from this sum up to Six Hundred Fifty-Seven Thousand Dollars ($657,000).

A contract was made with The Hewitt Company, a financial campaign and public service corporation of Spartanburg, South Carolina, through Colonel L. A. Dean, an attorney of Rome, Georgia, to conduct a campaign for marketing the stock and bonds of the Limestone-Morgan Bridge Company for the purpose of raising the funds with which to build the bridge. This service, among others, includes the organization of a campaign for the purpose of bringing to the attention of the public the advantages to be derived from the building of the bridge, and to direct the method of awakening public interest to the vital importance of this enterprise. It is the opinion of the business and professional men of this section of the state that this movement is one of the most important projects affecting this part of the state since the building of the local shops of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company.

The action met with the hearty approval of each and all of the directors present, viz.: C. E. Frost, Clyde Hendrix, Tennis Tidwell, Carl D. Patterson, J. W. Wyker, John Patterson, Lamar Penney and S. A. Lynne.

The want columns offer a splendid opportunity to the man who wants work and to the man who wants help. Advertise today its only a small sum that you will be glad to have spent.

The Fez was more prominent than straws in the summertime in Albany-Decatur Friday.

The senate debate on the Underwood bill seems to be a kind of "taint," "tis" party.

To save us we can't help wondering how that 300 pound negro over in Alabama City ever sleeps in a jail house bunk.

The rigorous life the Shoals have led during the past few years certainly should develop plenty of muscle in time.

Sometimes we wonder if all the folks who go to Florida and come back to tell us stories about that state are fishermen.

The Alabama Power company addressing the people of the Tri-Cities, says the company is willing to help the Tennessee-Valley grow. That is a praise-worthy stand.

A presidential salary may change the point of view, but newspaper editors will have difficulty understanding how the white house occupants ever had the nerve to refuse their gift turkey and buy one for themselves.

Hek Wakefield, one of the most popular, as well as most proficient, football stars of the South, will have the sympathy of Dixie fans in his bereavement. Hek's brother, Jack, disappointed at refusal of a Memphis girl to attend a banquet with him, put a bullet in his temple.

Dr. Frank Crane dislikes the carrying of clubs by policemen. Perhaps Dr. Crane has never been a policeman, and never has found occasion to arrest an unruly drunk, or halt the flight of a thief. Clubs may be used more often than necessary but Dr. Crane and others might remember that policemen, as a rule, find their principal personal contact is with people who already have broken one law and are not adverse to breaking another. Policemen get little enough of protection or praise.

Editor S. E. Rudd of the Moulton Advertiser, was a visitor here Friday to be initiated into the Grotto. Mr. Rudd, naturally, was very much occupied during the day, but he found time to call at The Daily office and inform us progress is being made on the roads connecting Morgan and Lawrence Counties. The road from the Twin Cities to Moulton is rough in spots, but fairly good all the way, he said. When Lawrence County and Morgan County are joined together by improved highways, both counties are going to enjoy the resultant blessings.

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT SHOWN IN HATTIESBURG AND BIRMINGHAM

As the date of the anniversary of Our Savior nears, it is refreshing to read in two exchanges two stories which evidence the Christmas spirit. One of these stories we find in The Age-Herald, under a Hattiesburg, Miss., date line. The article tells of the plight of a widow and six children, who had been living in an abandoned barn. Through the efforts of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Protestants, Jews and Catholics of Hattiesburg a cozy little cottage will be erected and turned over to the family to be called their very own. Isn't it fine that the Christmas spirit can cause us to forget our differences and unite in an effort to bring relief to deserving people? After all, what do our petty differences of this world amount to, compared with the life which awaits us in that Everlasting Tomorrow?

The other article The Daily has reference to is found on the first page of The Southern Labor Review, also published in Birmingham. The article says:

Organized labor has much to be proud of during the closing days of this year. The good that has been accomplished cannot be figured in dollars alone, but with united front have borne the guns of battle against the evils of the nation—Child labor, Sovietism, and many other "isms" that tend to disrupt rather than build up.

Organized labor has proven to be one of America's greatest institutions. We are justly proud.

The periodical, which calls itself "not an agitator, but an educator," might have told at length some of the things labor had accomplished for itself during the past year, but unselfishly the journal says nothing of that feature of the organization's work, but reminds its readers of what has been accomplished for the nation.

Wouldn't this world be transformed if we all gave more attention to what we can do for our government, our associates and our people, and less to what we can do for ourselves?

MORGAN DISCOVERS WHO OWNS THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

Southern citizens who have recently received checks from the Southern Railway for dividends on common stock may have expressed some surprise, inasmuch as it has been the custom for some six years of the road to put its earnings into improvement of the company's properties.

The Wall Street Journal, which is always interested in the business policies of all the larger organizations underlook to discover why the Southern now was paying dividends on its common stock, whereas only a short time ago the Southern was putting the profits back in the business.

The Wall Street Journal made the same interesting discovery that J. P. Morgan and company was said to have made, that the Southern railway is owned by the man who wanted dividends and got them.

Jeremiah Millbank declared to be a "quiet, unassuming young man" of Greenwich, Conn., was said to have written a letter to Fairfax Harrison, president of the Southern in which Mr. Millbank informed Mr. Harrison that, as owner of common stock in the road, he would like some dividends. He was said to have expressed great satisfaction with the manner in which the road was being operated, and now if he was given a check, his cup of happiness would be full. President Harrison replied, expressing appreciation of the tone of the letter, but pointing out the policy of the road as a reason why dividends were not paid.

Most men would have stopped then, but Mr. Millbank seems to have been a rather unusual individual. Inasmuch as President Harrison had said something or other about the approval of the plan by no lesser financial lights than the J. P. Morgan company, Mr. Millbank decided he would go to see Morgan himself.

The Selma Journal quoting the Charlotte Observer publishes the following version of the interview:

So Mr. Millbank a day or so afterwards took a copy of his letter and the reply from Mr. Harrison, and called up J. P. Morgan and Co. He asked to be shown to the officer who handled Southern Railway financing. He was shown, directly into the office of Thomas Cochran, and J. P. Morgan himself was there with Mr. Cochran.

Mr. Millbank showed the letters to Mr. Morgan and was told, yes, that they were familiar with the correspondence and that was correct. "But I own some common stock, and I want some dividends," Mr. Millbank said.

Mr. Morgan then answered that he understood that, and that he wished Mr. Millbank could have dividends, but that the situation had already been explained.

Mr. Millbank re-iterated a time or two that he wanted dividends, and obtained the same answer. At last he almost whispered: "But Mr. Morgan, you don't understand. I own the Southern Railway, and I want some dividends."

But Mr. Morgan and Mr. Cochran leaped to their feet. "How much Southern common stock do you own, Mr. Millbank?" they asked.

"Why, I own 500,000 shares," Mr. Millbank replied. "You shall have some dividends," Mr. Morgan thereupon immediately assured him.

And so it was, Mr. Millbank and his associates of Case, Pomeroy & Co., had begun buying Southern common when it was 17, and had accumulated the actual majority of common stock of the railroad. As he told Mr. Morgan in his quiet manner, "I own the Southern Railway."

Mr. Millbank now has dividends on his common stock. So have other people.

The Southern Railway, being a very important link in the transportation system of the Tennessee Valley, the people of this section are indebted to the press for discovering just who it is who owns the system.

The manner of discovery was handled by the press in a semi-humorous vein, but in all seriousness, the original financial policy of the Southern may have been good or bad. The Daily is in no position to judge, but The Daily does know that the Southern is one of the faster growing roads of the South; it has made rapid strides under the leadership and inspiration of President Harrison, and the Tennessee Valley is glad, indeed, that as "The Southern Serves the South," it is growing and expanding along with this great section of Dixie.

A TRAIN OF THOUGHTS

For the Sabbath and Other Days

By J. E. Blair

Words, are like the ladies are some times said to be: "we cannot get along with them or without them." Words have caused endless disagreements. Only words as well meant will be considered here (of course "bad" words, words intended to wound and to destroy are all to the bad. There is no use to consider such words.) But the best words, the words most "fitly spoken" they have caused endless strife. What words are better intended than the "creed words" those that have expressed, or rather tried to express our social religious beliefs. But look at the trouble the words in the creeds have caused. Did such trouble arise because men's beliefs are so widely different. No. For fundamentally, the members of our race are in agreement. We are human beings before we are members of creed sects. (And when people can express their humanity despite creeds as they are worked, people will get together. There may even be a universal church unity, despite the sayings of such wise men as Billy Sunday to the contrary, notwithstanding.) Keeping in mind "good" words only, "Why have 'good' words caused so much trouble? Well, in the main, it is because words are too weak to carry thought. They are not big enough to express great ideas correctly, or at least in such a way as that all human beings will interpret the same statements in the same way. To illustrate the treachery of words: Once there was a judge, stated Hon. R. T. Simpson of Florence, who as long as he merely named his decisions as for or against the defendant, was never overruled by the higher courts. But later the judge began to write elaborate decisions. He then began to be "reversed" by the higher courts and he finally lost his job. If people could once believe and realize that the "nomenclature" (so to speak) of ideas is not so important and that words cannot adequately express thought, there would be millions fewer religious fusses. If it were generally believed as the Bible says that "the letter killeth," there would be millions fewer religious controversies. It might be noticed in this connection that Galileo, a big man mentioned in the Bible spoke with contempt of mere words, saying "if it be a matter of words, etc."

The Savior wrote no creed. He was too wise to even write at all, except the time He wrote where He knew the waves would destroy His words. There are at least two prominent Christian denominations that have not committed their beliefs to words, but the members of these denominations are closely bound together. Words have to be used, of course. But they are more dangerous than gun powder or the deadly airplane. Even the best meant words cause much trouble. Moral: say as little as possible, for there is no absolute sure way of getting your meaning understood, since you have to use words, mere words to express yourself.

Words are the vehicles of thought but they break down under the weight of their mighty cargo.

Many Youngsters Are Enjoying Hike

The boys of the Twin Cities certainly responded in fine shape to today's nut hunt put on by the local Y. M. C. A. under the leadership of Ferrow Himes, Boys' Work secretary. Young Addison Poole, from Flint, acting as the guide was on hand bright and early, and with him, composing the hikers, were John Darmer, James Wilks, John Higson, Bayne Vaughn, Albert Clopton, J. W. Goode, Robert Masterson, Ben Martin, Leonard Nelson, Howard Gilliam, Bobbie Pugh, Billy Nelson, Felix Weaver, George Rothfuss, Paul Draper, Clifford Moore, Albert Thornhill, Gilbert Lawton, Boyce Huie and Willie Denton.

Upon departure of the boys from the Association building this morning Physical Director Arvidson promised the boy, coming back home with the most nuts, a little surprise gift.

WHY GO TO CHURCH?

Because the church is and always has been a bureau of information concerning the way from earth to heaven.
Because God established it that He might be able to reveal His will to men.
Because it is the only available place where we may learn our whole duty toward God and man.
Because it sets up the highest type of civilization humanity has ever known.
Because public worship is God's own way of bringing folks to the highest standards of social and moral life.
You are at perfect liberty to treat this as you deem it best.—H. L. Spencer, S. S. Teacher in C. M. E. Church.

ALBANY HIGH SCHOOL ANNUAL FOR BETTER SCHOOL AND CITY

To the Editor: The editor and managers of the 1925 "Golden Memories," have decided to depart from the customary form of High School Annual giving the activities of the senior class and high school only, to a better form that will be for the good of the city, the business, churches and other organizations of the community.

The "Golden Memories" is a year book published by the senior class portraying the life of the school under the general heads, administration, class organizations and activities of the student body. The plan devised by the staff of the "Golden Memories" is to feature the school as usual but in a more interesting and adequate way. Also to add a new section to boost our town. The purpose is to advertise the business, to show the people of the other sections of the country what a great town and school we have and what we are doing to make them better.

In order to put this project over we must have the co-operation of all business men and organizations of the town. We have the support of the school and all of its officials. It is now up to the officials and business men of our town whether they want to co-operate in this great movement for a better and greater Albany, or just let it drop and run on in the same old rut.

The annual staff officials will be sent out in a few days to line up all business interests, churches, industries, city officials, and other organizations of the town in this big movement for a better and greater Albany.

Here are some of the benefits derived from an annual publication by a high school. Why not apply these facts to the business of the town. Any school is judged by the number and character of its student enterprises. The annual certainly is one of the greatest enterprises in the school. It affords an opportunity for the student body to show their ability and school spirit. It is an excellent means of getting members of a school to work, and all look forward to its appearance with eagerness. It then fills an important place as a means of developing literary and art talents among the students. The annual is the most important medium by which the people of the town and other towns can see what the schools are doing. Let us say that an annual furnishes the best possible advertisement for the school. The time has come when the school without an annual is below the common standard. Thus we see that an annual is essential to the modern school, and what concerns the school concerns the people of the community for those who do not have children in school have some interest in the town. The school is one of the most important institutions in a community. A town is largely judged by its schools. In a few more years the High School boys and girls will be the men and women of the town.

Therefore every person in Albany is directly or indirectly benefited by the "Golden Memories." The Annual staff expects encouragement from the town and the co-operation of all the business men of the town. Just as the school plant aims to give young men and women the best education possible the annual staff of the "Golden Memories" aims to publish the best school annual possible. To do this we must have the whole hearty co-operation of all the officials, organizations and business men of the town. Signed:

EDWARD R. SPURLOCK,
Editor-in-Chief The Golden Memories.

Mr. and Mrs. Dick Harris and Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Elliott will spend the weekend with Mr. Jim Harris at Flower Hill.

Mrs. J. E. Wilder was taken home on Thursday from the Benevolent hospital where she was operated on recently for appendicitis.

Mrs. E. R. Guy has sufficiently recovered to leave St. Vincent's hospital but will remain in Birmingham for a few weeks longer.

Little Lampkin Gay, who has been in Birmingham for the past several weeks with his parents, is spending today with his grandmother, Mrs. A. B. Lampkin.

B. W. Lile of Trinity, who has been ill for some time, is spending a while at the home of his sister, Mrs. F. F. Tidwell.

Mr. and Mrs. Jetty Ryan and Mrs. Samuel Blackwell will spend Sunday in Cullman as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ryan and Mr. and Mrs. Blain, parents of the former.

AMUSEMENTS

"The Enemy Sex," James Cruze' latest production for Paramount which features Betty Compson, has one of the strongest casts which has ever been directed by the man who made "The Covered Wagon."

Betty Compson's role of "Dodo" Baxter brings together an actress and a part remarkably well suited to each other. "Dodo" Baxter is a girl who goes to New York armed with beauty and wit. She disturbs the equanimity of New York's smart set and teaches a number of the male members that money does not buy everything. The part is ideally suited to Betty Compson. Contrasting with the tragic character she portrayed in her recent Joseph Henabery production for Paramount, "The Stranger," the role she plays in "The Enemy Sex" is all merriment and fire.

The supporting cast is headed by Percy Marmont, Kathryn Williams, Huntly Gordon and De Witt Jennings.

Percy Marmont's work in many important productions in 1923, including "The Light That Failed," places him in the foremost ranks of screen actors according to the critics. Kathryn Williams is one of the best known players in motion pictures. Huntly Gordon appeared as leading man with both Gloria Swanson and Pola Negri during the past year. De Witt Jennings has created many remarkable characters and in "The Enemy Sex" has a role of unusual power.

Included in the cast are Sheldon Lewis, Dot Farley, Pauline Bush, Frank Bonner, Ed Faust, Will H. Turner, Kate Toncray, Ed Brady, John Roche, William Austin and J. Morris Foster.

"The Enemy Sex," adapted by Walter Woods and Harvey Thew from the novel, "The Salamander," by Owen Johnson, will be shown at the Princess Theatre Monday and Tuesday for two days only.

The theatrical season here would be lacking indeed if it did not include a visit from "Lasses" and his forty fellow entertainers. The present season is the fifth of the All-Stars and each in turn have shown a substantial increase in popularity over its predecessor until now it may confidently be declared the most popular of all the blackface aggregations now touring.

Spaeth and Company, the enterprising New York producers, who have been responsible for the All Stars since its creation repeat with confidence that their present organization is "stronger than ever in its personnel and greater in numbers than in its previous four seasons and will come closer to approximating all that is truly novel and best in this particular class of entertainment than has ever before been attained by any minstrel troupe. Droll "Lasses," who is ever a host in himself, is now more firmly established in the regard of minstrel lovers than any other burnt cork star. The road to stardom in "Lasses" chosen field is a rough one and to make the grade and reach the position now conceded to "Lasses" is considerable of an achievement.

The Happy Surprise with Which Junior Greeted Madge.

"What are you waiting for?"

Madge looked up imperiously from the armchair in which I had ensconced her, and from which she had issued the command to bring Junior to her.

"Because there is nothing to hurry for," I parried. "Junior was still asleep when I looked in a few minutes ago."

"That's no sign he's asleep now," she retorted acidly. "You know he generally wakes up by this time. You act as if I had some contagious disease. I never heard before that a fall was catching."

Her voice was heavily sarcastic, and I gave the laugh which she patiently expected at her sally.

"One never can tell about these things," I said demurely, starting for the door. "Medical science is making all sorts of new discoveries, you know. But I'll look at Junior again. If he's awake, I'll dress him and bring him in to you right away."

"That's something more like it," she commented approvingly. "I was beginning to think that something was up which you didn't want me to know."

I bowed mentally to her intuition as I hurried into the room next door where I had left Junior and Marion asleep. I dreaded infinitely the explanation to Mother Graham of the inflamed and blotched condition of her beloved grandson's face.

A glorious improvement.

I had left the room darkened, but when I entered the sun was streaming into windows to the top of which the shades had been sent, and Marion, perched upon the bed with Junior, was examining his face with a serious, knowing air, which would have done credit to any hospital nurse.

"Oh! Mama!" Junior's voice was a carol. "Those nasty old sores are most all gone away, and I don't burn any more."

"There are only a few tiny places left, really. And the beautiful dark blue eyes, so like her mother's, to mine. And they look more like mosquito bites than anything else."

I had my little lad in my arms by this time, and was carefully examining him, finding only confirmation of Marion's verdict. Mingled with my relief at seeing that the mysterious poison received at the beach had not injured him, was a newly-found hope.

HELP WANTED

By Julian Hamel

Copyright, 1924, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc. Great Britain rights reserved.

THE help wanted problem is indeed serious at almost any time. But particularly does it become of grave moment when one begins to prepare the Christmas list. With Christmas so near and so many things to do and so much shopping to attend to, the list looms large. Especially perplexing is the question: What shall she get for HIM?

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT His Folk's Problem

Copyright, 1924, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

TELL me the old, old story—and tell it in a brand-new way—that's what I thought when I read the letter this morning, all written on pretty gray paper with a silver edge.

It's from a girl of twenty-one—a married girl, yes, she's been a bride of a year and her husband's a darling and she's dead in love with him yet and he's still dead in love with her.

They go picnicking together and walking in the moonlight and he brings her flowers when he ought to bring them, and she gets up early and early to have him breakfast ready for him before he starts to work—and they have a nice little home, but—

Oh, of course, there's a but, and this time it's about his people. He has a mother and a father and an invalid brother, and the little wife is very glad to help her husband out with his people.

She has a household budget and she's been sending twenty dollars a week to them right straight along, and lots of times she has gone without things she really needed herself in order to send that money to "the folks."

This summer the little wife bought some very pretty gingham for summer dresses and a nice coat—and every once in a while she buys a nice big bill of groceries and sends that to "the folks."

But, no matter what she sends or what she does, "the folks" complain about it. The new cloak she sent is not the style Mother likes, but it will do, and the shoes aren't at all what she wanted, but she'll make the best of them, and, as for the hat, that never suits at all.

Encourage Him to Help Them

And that isn't the worst of it—there's another sister who lives in the same town with "the folks" and she's always writing to husband and telling him his wife is extravagant and he ought to go back home to work where he could do more for "the folks."

And Husband has a good job where he is—and if he went back home he'd have to take his chances.

And Husband's folks keep at him and keep at him, and the poor little wife doesn't know what on earth to do.

Sometimes she gets so desperate that she feels like running away.

She told her husband all about it not long ago—and he said he didn't blame her at all for feeling the way she does. He thinks she has been very kind and generous—and he has told her not to bother any more about it at all—not even to write. And then they write and want to know what's the matter with her, and she tells Husband not to tell his folks anything—he hates quarrels and can't bear misunderstandings—but somehow she does wish he'd take some kind of a stand. Come out in plain English and tell "the folks" that they must have some sort of reason and common sense—and she all wrong and what ought she to do about it, that's what she wants to know.

Now, my dear, you're not wrong at all. You're right—absolutely right—except for one thing:

ODD and INTERESTING FACTS

True hail falls only in Summer—and the hotter the weather the larger the hailstones.

Among the deaths from wild animals in India last year 20,000 were due to snakes, while not a single casualty due to lions was reported.

Chessmen and gaming dice are among the discoveries made during the excavations in a jungle near Sind, India. They are said to date back to 500 B. C.

Fires caused seventy-one deaths in London last year, during which period the London Fire Brigade answered 7,227 calls. Of these, 2,403 were false alarms.

The remarkable rock formation, known as the Natural Bridge is located about sixteen miles from Lexington, in Rockbridge County, Va. The bridge is about 215 feet above the surface of Rock Creek and spans an opening 90 feet wide. In width the bridge ranges from 50 to 150 feet and the crown is nearly 40 feet in thickness. The bridge is crossed by a public road. For many years the land on which this structure is located was owned by Thomas Jefferson. There are several other remarkable natural bridges in the United States.

Rice growing began in this country in 1694, when the Governor of South Carolina succeeded in cultivating it in his garden. Rice is probably the most widely used of all human foods.

Then Forget the Problem

As for paying the least attention to the grumbling and complaining and fault-finding of "the folks"—there's where you make a great mistake. Some people are not too proud to take generous favors, but they are too mean to take them generously, and so they "get even" by pretending that they are not pleased, no matter what you do.

Be generous, be light-hearted, be loving and be happy, little wife and let Husband's "folks" live their own mean and little grudging lives in their own mean little grudging way.

Diary of a Fashion Model

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

She C... an Unusual Dance Frock.

"A NOTHER new dance dress to design before I can get out to tea," Madame remarked, half to herself.

Gaby and I were seated near, waiting in hopes that no client would come in before closing time.

All this time Madame was wrapped in thought. She sat with her head resting on one slender hand, and I knew that she was dreaming of some beautiful creation.

Soon she stirred slightly, then took her pencil and began making swift strokes on the pad in her lap.

Gaby and I waited very quietly, for we were both very anxious to see what the outcome would be.

Presently Madame asked me to go on an errand. She said:

"Do dash up to the stock-room and ask for the small book of samples of chiffon in red, and also the samples of cerise ribbon."

I did as I was bidden, and when I returned, Gaby was seated by Madame, admiring the completed sketch.

"Here they are," I announced. "I was rather breathless from hurrying upstairs and back."

"You're a dear to have gotten them so quickly," Madame said. "I had a sudden inspiration and am simply dying to try it out."

I wanted to see what the inspiration would prove to be.

You see, I want to use two shades together that are ordinarily rather difficult, but they are very lovely when they happen to be happy choices," Madame explained.

She searched hastily for a certain bit of ribbon among the bunch of samples I had given her. They were clamped together at the top.

"Here it is!" she said.

Next she held the bit of ribbon against various samples of the chiffon, until she found a bit of strawberry red that was simply stunning with the cerise.

"Just what I wanted!" she announced triumphantly.

I realized that the combination was really stunning, though I should not have expected it to be.

"And here is the sketch," Madame said, handing me the pad.

I saw a skirt of light frock, cut plain, with many strips of ribbon down the front, and a tiny flare emerging from the end of each strip.

"The strawberry chiffon is so soft and fine it can be made that way to perfection," Madame explained. "The ribbon is applied the same way in the back, too."

Gaby and I were both delighted with the frock.

Tomorrow's

HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

SUNDAY AND MONDAY, DECEMBER 14-15.

Sunday's astrological forecast is for unusual activity and liveliness with the nature under high stimulus. Especially in the realm of the spiritual and the psychic may this energy predispose to investigation.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a very active year, with affairs generally prospering, but change or travel is advised against. A child born on this day should be active, energetic, resourceful and successful.

Monday's horoscope holds several adverse figures and urges the need of guarding against loss of money and positions for those in the employment of others. All are warned against quarreling and betrayal by false friends.

Those whose birthday it is may be under a menacing rule for the financial interests. They should guard their positions and beware false friends and quarrels. A child born on this day may have difficulties in health and finance to confront and should be equipped to surmount these and taught to be cautious in its friendships and pleasures.

Note the Novel Use of the Cerise Ribbons That Trim This Strawberry-Red Frock.

Moulton News

J. T. Dort, District Engineer of the Forestry Service from Washington, D. C., is in Moulton with B. M. Lufburrow, head of the Alabama Forest Reservation, to inspect the forestry roads and the road leading south from Moulton through Wren to the reservation. It is hoped that the delayed plans for building a highway out from Moulton to the mountains may soon be in motion for the completion of the road for which the local farmers have agreed to haul the stone crushed by the government and place on the road which is also to be graded by the government. It is understood that when the project was advertised the estimated cost was too high for acceptance. At present the roads—well graded dirt roads—are in excellent condition across the forests from Lawrence county into Winston.

M. B. Mackey, who has been running the Pastime Moving Picture Theatre for the past several months announces that he will close out the business today as it does not warrant a continuation with the high class pictures he has used and he will not use any of a poorer type. The theatre has been well attended considering the size of the town and has furnished a variety of wholesome entertainment for the citizens which they will regret to lose. Just at present without even a school auditorium it is difficult to find a place in the town for any entertainment and will be until the new high school auditorium is completed which will be several months yet.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. U. E. Reid regret to hear of the death of their little eighteen months' old son, William, on December 4, at their home in Florida where they moved a few months ago from Moulton. For many years Mr. Reid served as pastor of the Moulton Baptist church.

S. L. Morrow, county agent, was in Moulton Thursday. He announces that his report on the fertilizer projects made in the county by one hundred farmers during the past season will soon be ready for the public. He has a plan whereby copies of the report may be placed in each school of the county carrying with problems for pupil solution in the use of home mixed fertilizers. Mr. Morrow is working to establish half a dozen or more good agricultural clubs in the county in the next year.

Mrs. W. C. Bragg entertained in honor of Mrs. A. M. Richards, Jr., Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Richards delighted the guests with a number of piano selections preceding entertainment furnished by Mrs. Bragg and her guests.

G. T. Odom, of Birmingham, a representative of a large school furnishing company was in Moulton Wednesday to see school officials about purchases of heaters and blackboard.

Christmas holidays for the rural schools of Lawrence county are set for from the evening of Friday, December 19 to the beginning of work on Monday morning December 29.

Frank Witt, of the Beavars Cross Roads district was a business caller in Moulton Thursday.

J. A. Bracken, of the Morris Chapel neighborhood, was on the streets of Moulton Friday.

Miss Lyda Tidwell, elementary school supervisor, lost Thursday from her work account a severe cold.

J. C. Cowan and R. P. Montgomery went to Albany-Decatur Thursday to see about material for the county high school building.

Work on the county high school building is progressing well during the sunny days although the night freezes delay early morning work with the brick.

W. T. Tenant of Tuscumbia, representing the Delco Lighting company is in Moulton interesting parties in better lighting.

Judge W. R. Jackson and T. R. Alexander are having a lighting plant installed for the benefit of their residences.
